the Hopkinsville Mercury thus riugs out for war: Convention at Frankfort on the Twenty-Second of mext February, and to appoint delegates to that Convention; all of which the meeting did, and did well, as a glance at the proceedings will show.

The step, we need not say, is a wine ceditinely one. When the other day wa asked our friends in Madison have soon we should be allowed to chronicle the taking of this very step, we of course had no thought that the west that the convention of the proceeding of this very step, we of course had no thought that the was taken even then; yet such is the fact. Our friends in Madison have answered to the spur of when Cley and Pelk were up for the Presidency.
